A shabbily dressed man once went to a pet shop. There he saw a cage having four little birds inside. He kept on gazing at the birds. He went to the shopkeeper and said, "How much for this cage with birds?" "Just eight hundred rupees" said the shopkeeper. The man took out some crumpled notes and counted. He had only seven hundred thirty rupees. He said to the shopkeeper, "This is all I have but I need this badly. Can I have it?" The shopkeeper thought for a while then agreed to sell it to the man. The man handed over the money to the shopkeeper, took the cage and opened the tiny gate. The little birds inside flew away instantly. The surprised shopkeeper asked him, "Why did you waste all your money when you had to set them free?" The man said, "Never mind sir, I had been imprisoned for no crime for the last three years. The precious thing I just bought, has given these bits of paper a little worth."
